The New Internationalism

Can only come about with a knowledge of our neighbors' present-day language and customs. These books will help to establish this knowledge.

HOWARD: Contes de la Grande Guerre

A book of vital, thrilling interest. It is especially pertinent in that it deals with significant phases and interesting events of the Great War in France. Actual fighting, the armistice celebration, Alsace-Lorraine, these and many other subjects are presented in this book. The language is the terse, pure French of the best journalistic prose. Suitable for first-year college or second-year high school.

BLASCO IBANEZ: Vistas Sudamericanas

A textbook by "the first of living European novelists." It is composed partly of selections from "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and "The Argonauts," and partly of material written purposely for this work. The book aims "to have the two Americas know each other."

It was edited with vocabulary and exercises by Miss Marcial Dorado, a life-long friend of the author's, and is admirably fitted for classroom use by virtue of its simplicity and charm of style. For second-year college or third-year high school.
